"I Saw Her."

BY "CARNICE."

I saw her 'mid the happy throng,
Her rosy cheek with health did bloom;
Her blithe voice did cheer the heart,
And wistful smile dispell'd all gloom.

I saw her again, the rose had fled,
And heaviness was in her eyes;
Her feeble limbs could scarce support
Her frame: alas! how soon she flies.

I saw her on her dying bed,
Her pale transparent brow was calm;
Her still sweet voice did peace diffuse
Around her, sweet as Eastern balm.

I saw her in the last tomb laid,
And took the path to realms above,
With angels pure, in bliss to dwell,

A Sudden Conversion.

BY SILVANUS COBB, JR.

THE simple story I am about to relate possesses much interest for those who were ever acquainted with the parties concerned, and to others its interest will not only be in its truth but also in the peculiar soul touch it develops.

In one of the northern towns of Vermont, lived a young man whom I shall call Daniel. He was a lawyer by profession; more than he did, and no one was better calculated to secure the good will and friendship of all with whom he came in contact. Business poured in upon him, and he failed not to give the utmost satisfaction.

At the age of twenty-seven, Bryan took to himself a wife from among the most favored ones of the country. Mary Felton experienced a strange pride when she gave her hand to the young lawyer, and if none envied her, many at least prayed that they might be as fortunate.

But ere long a cloud came over the scene. Conviviality ran high among the members of the bar, and Bryan possessed one of those peculiar temperaments which at length gave the whole body and soul up to the demon of appetite. For three years he followed the social custom of the times without neglecting much of his business, but finally he sank into the lowest pit of degradation. When at the age of five-and-thirty, he had become a confirmed drunkard. He now neglected his clients altogether, for he could not remain sober long enough at any one time to carry any case through court. The only business he now had on his hands was the collecting of some debts.

On the evening of his thirty-fifth birthday he joined the Washingtonians, and once more his bright genius shone out upon the world. But it could not last long amid the examples of those who were his constant companions, he went back to his cups, and down he sank as rapidly as he had risen. In one short year from that time he was a miserable degraded thing. People who had left notes and accounts with him to collect called at his house, and upon enquiring of his wife where he would be found, she would tell them he was away. Poor woman, they could not bear to dispute her, and they would go their way, though they knew full well that the remains of Daniel Bryan were prostrate upon his bedroom floor.

One day a Mr. Vinson went to see him. Vinson had left notes and accounts to the amount of several thousands of dollars with Bryan to collect, and he was anxious about them. His poor wife answered him as usual—that her husband had gone away.

"My dear madam," returned Mr. Vinson, "I know your misfortune, and I appreciate your feelings, but I must see your husband. If I can see him for even one minute I can learn all I wish to know."

Mary Bryan spoke not a word, but with a tearful eye turned away, and Mr. Vinson followed her. He found Bryan in a back room, stretched at full length upon the floor, with a jug of Medford rum by his side! With much effort Vinson aroused the poor inebriate. In a state of semi-consciousness, and asked him if he had done anything about the notes and accounts which he had left with him. "Yes," answered the lawyer, in a weak, hithering voice, "I've had the money for you over a month. I've deducted my per centage, and you'll find the rest in that trunk. Mary's got the key."

Mrs. Bryan was called in, the key was produced, and Mr. Vinson found his money—four thousand and some odd hundreds of dollars—all right and safe.

In his worst moments Bryan never used for himself a single penny bill in that trunk. Hundreds there were who worked hard to reclaim the wanderer, but without effect. Years went by, and he sank lower and lower—yet his wife left him. His brother, a young lawyer, named Moses Felton, often urged her to forsake her husband, at the same time offering her a comfortable home beneath his own roof, but she would not listen.

At length all hope was given up. Week after week would the fallen man be drunk on the floor, and not a day of real sobriety marked his course. I doubt if such another case was ever known. He was now too low, for conviviality, for those with whom he would have associated would not drink with him.

All alone in his own office and chamber he still continued to drink, and even his very life seemed the offspring of the jug.

In early spring, Moses Felton had a call to go to Ohio. Before he set out, he visited his sister. He offered to take her with him, but she would not go.

"But why stay here?" urged the brother. "You are all faded away, and disease is upon you. Why should you live with such a brute?"

"Hush, Moses. Speak not," answered the wife, keeping back the tears. "I will not leave him now. But he will soon leave me. He cannot live much longer."

At that moment Daniel entered the apartment. He looked like a wanderer from the tomb. He had his hat on, and his jug was in his hand.

"Ah—Moses—how are ye?" he gasped, for he could not speak plainly.

The visitor looked at him for a few moments in silence. Then, as his features assumed a cold, stern expression, he said, in strongly emphasized tones:

"Daniel Bryan, I have been your next best friend but one. My sister is an angel—but mated with a demon. I have loved you Daniel as I never loved man before; you were noble, generous and kind, but I hate you now, for you are a perfect devil incarnate. Look at that woman. She is my sister—she might now live with me in comfort, only she will not do so while you live; yet when you die she will come to me. Thus do I pray that God will soon give her joys to my keeping. Now, Daniel, I do sincerely pray that the first intelligence which reaches me from my native place after I shall have reached my new home, may be—THAT—YOU—ARE—DEAD!"

Bryan gazed upon the speaker some moments without speaking.

"Moses," he at length said, "you are not in earnest."

"As true as Heaven, Daniel, I am. When I know that you are dead, I shall be happy; and not until then—so go on—Fill your jug, and—"

"Stop, stop, Moses, I can reform!"

"You cannot. It is beyond your power—You have had inducements enough to have reformed half the sinners of creation, and yet you are now lower than ever before. Go and die, sir, as soon as you can, for the moment that sees you thus shall not find me among the mourners."

Bryan's eyes flashed, and he drew himself proudly up.

"Go," he said, with a tone of the old, powerful sarcasm that had often electrified a jury, "go to Ohio, and I'll send you words. Go, sir, and watch the pot!"

With these words Daniel Bryan buried his jug into the fire-place, and while yet a thousand pieces were flying over the floor, he strode from the house. Mary sank fainting to the floor. Moses bore her to a bed, and then, having called in a neighbor, he hurried away, for the stage was waiting.

For a month Daniel Bryan hovered over the brink of the grave, but he did not die.

"One gift of bread will save you," said the doctor, who saw that the abrupt removal of all stimulants from a system that for long years had subsisted almost on nothing else, was nearly sure to prove fatal. "You can surely take a pill and not take more."

"Aye," gasped the poor man, "take a pill, and break my oath. Moses Felton shall never learn that I drank or rum killed me! If the want of it can kill me, then let me die! But I won't die! I'll live till Moses Felton shall eat his words."

He did live! An iron will conquered the messenger death had sent, and Daniel Bryan lived. For one month he could not even walk without help. But he had help—joyful, prayerful help. Mary helped him.

A year passed away, and Moses Felton returned to Vermont. He entered the court house at Burlington, and Daniel Bryan was upon the floor pleading for a young man who had been indicted for forgery. Felton started with surprise. Never before had Bryan looked so noble and commanding, and never before had such torrents of eloquence poured from his lips. The case was given to the jury and the youth was acquitted. The successful counsel turned from the court room, and he met Moses Felton.

"They shook hands, but did not speak. When they reached a spot where none others could hear them, Bryan stopped.

"Moses," he said, "do you remember the words you spoke to me a year ago?"

"I do, Daniel."

"Will you now take them back? Unsay them now and forever!"

"Yes, with all my heart."

"Then I am in part repaid."

"And what must be the remainder of the payment?" asked Moses.

"I must die an honest, unperjured man! The oath that has bound me thus far was made for life!"

That evening Mary Bryan was among the happiest of the happy. No allusion was made in words to that strange scene of one year before, but Moses could read in both the countenances of his sister and her husband the deep gratitude they did not speak.

And Daniel Bryan yet lives, one of the most honored men of Vermont. Five times has he sat in the State Legislature; twice in the Senate, and once in the National Congress, and he is yet a noble man, and an ornament to society, declining all offers of public office, from the fact that his profession is more lucrative; while plenty of others want the offices which he cares not for.

"Many who read this will know the character, whom I have thus used, and will at once recognize the true individuals beneath the fictitious names I have borrowed."

A CURIOUS REPLY. In France smoking is perhaps less a rage than it is with us; but in France the liberty of smoking is greater than in America. An elegantly dressed and aristocratic looking lady entered a first class railroad car, at the Paris depot, a day or two ago. As she opened the door and took her place she observed that the car was occupied by three or four gentlemen, one of whom, at the moment of her appearance, was in the act of lighting his cigar. Observing the lady, he made a significant grimace, and with the characteristic politeness of a Frenchman, said: "Would smoking inconvenience you, madame?" The lady turned toward him, and with an air of quiet dignity replied: "I do not know, sir; no gentleman has ever smoked in my presence!" He put out his cigar.

Stealing Water Melons.

A man in a country town took great pleasure in having a near garden. He had all kinds of vegetables and fruits earlier than his neighbors. But thieving boys in the neighborhood annoyed him; damaged his trees, trampled down his flowers, and "hooked" his choicest fruits. He tried various ways to protect his grounds; but his watch dogs were poisoned, and his set traps caught nothing but his fattest fowls and most favorite cat.

One afternoon, however, just at nightfall, he overhauled a couple of mischievous boys talking together, when one of them says:

"What do you say Joe? Shall we come the grab over them melons to-night? Old Swipes will be snoring like ten men before twelve o'clock."

"The other objected as there was a high wall to get over."

"Oh, pshaw!" was the reply; "I know a place where you can get over just as easy—know it like a book. Come, Joe, let's go it."

The owner of the melon patch didn't like the idea of being an eaves-dropper; but the conversation so intimately concerned his melons, which he had taken so much pains to raise, that he kept quiet, and listened to the plans of the young scapegraces, so that he might make it somewhat better some for them.

Ned proposed to get over the wall on the south side, by the great pear tree, and cut directly across to the summer-house, just north of which were the melons.

Joe was a clever fellow, who loved good fruit exceedingly, and was as obstinate as an ass. Get him once started to do a thing, and he would stick to it like a mud-turtle to a negro's toe. The other did not care so much for the melons as for the fun of getting them.

Now hear the owner's story:

"I made all needful preparations for the visit; put in brads pretty thick in the scuttling along the wall where they intended to get over; uncovered a large water-vat that had been filled for some time, from which, in dry weather, I was accustomed to water my garden; dug a trench a foot deep or so, and placed slender boards over it, which were slightly covered with dirt, and just beyond them some little cords, fastened tightly, some eight inches from the ground. I picked all the melons I cared to preserve, leaving pumpkins and squashes, about the size and shape of melons, in the place."

"The boys were quite right in supposing it would be dark; but they missed it a little in inferring that 'old Swipes,' as they called him, would be in bed. They old man liked a little fun as well as they and when the time came, from his hiding place he listened:

"Whist, Joe! don't you hear something?"

"I think that it was very probable they did, for hardly were the words uttered, than there came a sound of forcibly tearing fusion."

"Get off my coat tail!" whispered Joe.

"There goes one flap, sure as a gun! Why, get off, Ned."

And Ned was off, and one leg of his breeches besides; and then he was "aling," and "oh-ing," and telling Joe that he believed there were nails in the side of the wall, for something had scratched him tremendously and torn his breeches all to pieces."

Joe sympathized with him, for he said, "half his coat was hanging up there somewhere."

"They now started hand-in-hand, for Ned believed he 'knew the way.' They had arrived a little beyond the trees, when something went awry! swash! into the water-vat."

A sneeze ensued, then the exclamation, "Thunder! that water smells rather odd!"

Ned wanted to go home at once, but Joe was too much excited to listen for a moment to such a proposition.

"Never heard anything about that cistern before; the old fellow must have fired it on purpose to drown people in. Curious, though, that we should both fall in it!"

"They pushed on again for the melons. Presently they were caught by the cords and headlong they went into a heap of briars, and thistles, and the like, which had been placed there for their express accommodation."

"Such a gettin' up stairs!" muttered one.

"Nettles and thistles! how they prick exclaimed the other."

"They now determined to go on more cautiously. At length they arrived at the patch. How thick they are, Joe! Come here! There's more than a dozen fat ones right here! And down they sat in the midst of them, and seemed to conclude that they were amply rewarded for all mishaps."

"Here, Joe," said Ned; "take this melon; isn't it a rouser? Slush into it!"

"It cuts tremendous hard, Ned. Ned it's a squash!"

"No it isn't I tell you; it's a new kind! Old Swipes sent to Rhode Island for the seed, last spring."

"Well, then, all I've got to say, is that the old fellow got sucked in—that's all!"

"I'm going to gouge into this water-melon; halloo! there goes a half-dollar I've broke my knife. If I didn't know that was a water-melon, I should say it was a pumpkin. Fact is, I believe it is a pumpkin."

What the boys did besides, while the owner went to the stable and unlatched the dog, and led him into the garden, he couldn't say; that they took long steps, the onion and the flower-bed revealed in the morning.

They had paid pretty dearly for the whistle. They had not tasted a single melon; they had got scratched, had torn their clothes, were as wet as drowned rats, and half scared out of their wits at the venomous dog, and the apprehension of being discovered.

The next night the owner of the melon patch invited all the boys at the village, including Ned and Joe, to a feast of melons, on the principle of returning good for evil. This circumstance changed the boys' opinion of "old Swipes," and his melons were never disturbed again.—Harper's Magazine.

Arrival of the Cambria.

HAIFA, Sept. 12th. The Cambria arrived this p. m., with Liverpool dates to the 30th. The steamship Atlantic arrived out on the 28th.

The Arabia had been docked and had sustained but slight injuries, and would leave as an extra ship from Haifa on the 4th Sept.

ENGLAND. The conservatives were arranging their internal difficulties with a view of making a grand attempt to overthrow Palmerston's Administration.

The Queen of Oude remained at Southampton unrecognized by Queen Victoria.

FRANCE. Political news unimportant. The Emperor intends making a prolonged stay at Biarritz.

Another Prosecution of members of a secret Society was progressing at Dijon. A Berlin paper authoritatively contradicts all recent statements relative to proposed Orleans banishment.

An Earthquake occurred at Algeria on the 21st. Several villages were destroyed.

SPAIN. Madrid papers say decrees are about to appear of the Cortes, regulating the Press, remodeling the Council of State, and re-establishing the Constitution of 1845. 200 prisoners had been embarked at Barcelona for Cuba. 16 civil Governors of Provinces had been dismissed and successors appointed. One half from the Progressives and half from the Moderates party. Antislavery advocates say the Ministry continues perfectly united, and the Queen places every confidence in them.

BELGIUM. The free-trade Congress excites considerable attention in England.

PRUSSIA. Grand manoeuvres of Prussian troops are going on at Goner on the Rhine. The reported erection of a line of fortresses around Berlin is confirmed.

ITALY. Austrian journals repeat their denial of any increase of Austrian forces in Italy, but admit the troops already there fully reach the war strength.

The Milan Gazette denies that Cicerognie was shot by Austrians, asserting that he was drowned in his attempt to cross the River Po.

The reported dissatisfaction in the Neapolitan army is confirmed, caused by certain regiments having been ordered to work on a railway.

Important Discovery.

DR. HALSEY'S

FOREST WINE,

AND

Gum-Coated Forest Pills.

20,000 CURES IN ONE YEAR.

DR. HALSEY, of New York, has invented a process by which a rich and luxuriant

WINE is produced from certain plants of great medicinal virtues. This delightful Wine combinations all the high medicinal properties of the

Dandelion, Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Wild

Cherry, and certain other plants, whose virtues are ten times more effective as medicinal agents. So pure and concentrated are the medical properties of this Wine, that it has been found the most effective medicine now in use.

Frequently less than a single bottle restores the lingering Patient from debility and sickness to strong and vigorous health. Every dose shows its good effects on the constitution, and improves the general health; and with Dr. Halsey's celebrated GUM-COATED FOREST

PILLS as an adjunct, all the following disorders are permanently cured.

Dyspepsia and Indigestion.—A box of the Forest Pills, and a bottle of the Wine, will cure the most distressing forms of this complaint.

Ague and Fever.—One or two doses of the Pills, and a bottle of Wine will break the ague and cure the Patient in all cases, when the directions on the bottle are adhered to.

Dropsical Complaints.—From one to two boxes of the Pills, and three bottles of the Wine, cure this obstinate disorder.

Disorder of the Kidneys.—The Forest Wine and Pills have proved highly efficacious in this disorder. One or two boxes of the Pills, and three or four bottles of the Wine, are sufficient to accomplish a cure in the worst cases.

Debility, Night Sweats, Expectorant and Weakly State of the Constitution.—The Forest Wine is a popular remedy for all these complaints. One to three bottles cure the worst cases without the use of the Pills; but when the complaint is accompanied with some other disorder, the Pills will be required.

Rheumatism.—The efficacy of the Forest

Remedies in Rheumatism is very singular.

Some of the most distressing cases I ever saw have been cured by them in ten or twelve days' time.

Bilious Disorders and Flat Stomach.—

One purgative dose of the Forest Pills will cure any bilious disorder, or any complaint arising from Flat Stomach and morbid condition of the bowels.

Fever.—One or two purgative doses will cure Fever.

Coughs, Colds, &c.—One box of the Pills, and a bottle of the Wine, will break up and cure the most severe colds, coughs and pain in the breast.

Ulcers, Blisters, Scalded Head,

Rings, Ringworm, Scald, Rheum, Sore

Eyes, and every kind of Itch.—These complaints all arise from one common cause—impure blood. Generally nothing but the Pills are required for the cure of the most of these disorders; but if both remedies are used, two boxes of the Pills, and two or three bottles of the Wine, will cure the worst cases, and frequently by less than half the quantity.

Jaundice.—Two boxes of the Pills, and as many bottles of the Wine, cure the worst case of Jaundice.

Female Obstructions, produced from bad colds or weakly constitutions. A few doses of the Forest Wine cures the most distressing forms of these complaints; and if the Wine be followed up a few weeks, these derangements will not occur again. The Wine exactly suits the female constitution, and gives strength, vigor, and blooming health. Over a million of boxes and bottles have been sold within the last two years, in the United States and Canada. Letters and certificates to the amount of many thousands, have been received, testifying to the cures and good effects of these remedies.

Forest Wine is in large square bottles, one dollar per bottle, or six bottles for five dollars.

General Office, 61, Walker Street, New York; and kept by one of more respectable druggists in almost every city and village in the United and British Colonies.

Agents.—Mr. Chas. Doan, Aurora; Mr.

Wm. D. Burr, Bradford; Dr. E. O. Lloyd,

Holland Landing; Mr. Wm. Doan, Sharon;

R. H. Hill, Richmond Hill, and

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

The blood furnishes the material of every ton

When pure, it secures health to every organ, while corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the primary seat of the stream of life, neutralizing the elements of disease, and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, any part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders.

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, a source of burning and afflicting, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these purgatives, in all cases, however arrayed, and in all climates.

lax, alterative and tonic: they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness-Nervous Complaints.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed
